Dunelm Medical Practice Consent Policy

Introduction

The purpose of this policy is to set out the Practice's approach to consent and the way in which the principles of consent will be put into practice.

Where possible, a clinician must be satisfied that a patient understands and consents to a proposed treatment, immunisation or investigation.

The clinician must also ensure that other possible treatment options, including the risks and benefits of each, have been explained to the patient before the patient makes their decision to consent.

Where a patient is accompanied by a carer, advocate or other support person, the clinician will ensure that:

- they understand the care, treatment and support choices available to the patient;
- involve them appropriately in making decisions about the patient's care;
- give opportunities for them to represent the views of the patient;

Whether explaining to a patient, carer, advocate or other support person; information given will include the nature, purpose, and risks of the procedure. If necessary, the use of drawings, interpreters, videos or other means will also be used to ensure that they understand, and have enough information to give 'Informed Consent'.

The Practice will ensure that where consent is necessary, the forms contained within this document will be completed and the action noted on the patient record.

The Practice will undertake an audit annually to determine that consent is always sought and recorded in-line with this policy.

Implied Consent

Implied consent will be assumed for many routine physical contacts with patients.

Where implied consent is to be assumed by the clinician, in all cases, the following will apply:

- An explanation will be given to the patient what s/he is about to do, and why.
- The explanation will be sufficient for the patient to understand the procedure.
- In all cases where the patient is under 18 years of age, a verbal confirmation of consent will be obtained and briefly entered into the medical record.
- Where there is a significant risk to the patient an 'Expressed Consent' will be obtained in all cases.

Expressed Consent

Expressed consent (written or verbal) will be obtained for any procedure which carries a risk that the patient is likely to consider as being substantial.

A note will be made in the medical record detailing the discussion about the consent and the risks.

A Consent Form may be used for the patient to express consent.

Obtaining Consent

- Consent (Implied or Expressed) will be obtained prior to the procedure, and prior to any form of sedation.
- The clinician will ensure that the patient is competent to provide a consent (16 years or over) or has “Gillick Competence” if under 16 years.
Further information about Gillick Competence and obtaining consent for children is set out below.
- Consent will include the provision of all information relevant to the treatment.
- Questions posed by the patient will be answered honestly, and information necessary for the informed decision will not be withheld unless there is a specific reason to withhold. In all cases where information is withheld, then the decision will be recorded in the clinical record.
- The person who obtains the consent will be the person who carries out the procedure (i.e. a nurse carrying out a procedure will not rely on a consent obtained by a doctor unless the nurse was present at the time of the consent).
- The person obtaining consent will be fully qualified and will be knowledgeable about the procedure and the associated risks.
- The scope of the authority provided by the patient will not be exceeded unless in an emergency.
- The Practice acknowledges the right of the patient to refuse consent, delay the consent, seek further information, limit the consent, or ask for a chaperone.
- Clinicians will use a Consent Form where procedures carry a degree of risk or where, for other reasons, they consider it appropriate to do so (e.g. malicious patients).
- No alterations will be made to a Consent Form once it has been signed by a patient.
- Clinicians will ensure that consents are freely given and not under duress (e.g. under pressure from other present family members etc.).
- If a patient is mentally competent to give consent but is physically unable to sign the Consent Form, the clinician should complete the Form as usual, and ask an independent witness to confirm that the patient has given consent orally or non-verbally.

Other aspects which may be explained by the clinician include:

- Details of the diagnosis, prognosis, and implications if the condition is left untreated.
- Options for treatment, including the option not to treat.
- Details of any subsidiary treatments (e.g. pain relief).
- Patient experiences during and after the treatment, including common or potential side effects and the recovery process.
- Probability of success and the possibility of further treatments.
- The option of a second opinion.

Immunisations

Informed consent must be obtained prior to giving an immunisation. Although there is no legal requirement for consent to immunisation to be in writing, a signature on a consent form is not conclusive proof that consent has been given, but serves to record the decision and discussions that have taken place with the patient, or the person giving consent on a child's behalf.

Consent for Children under 16 (Gillick Competence)

Everyone aged 16 or more is presumed to be competent to give consent for themselves, unless the opposite is demonstrated.

If a child under the age of 16 has “sufficient understanding and intelligence to enable him/her to understand fully what is proposed” (known as Gillick Competence), then s/he will be competent to give consent for him/herself.

Young people aged 16 and 17, and legally ‘competent’ younger children, may therefore sign a Consent Form for themselves, but may like a parent to countersign as well.

For children under 16 (except for those who have Gillick Competence as noted above), someone with parental responsibility should give consent on the child’s behalf by signing accordingly on the Consent Form.

Withdrawal of Patient Consent

- The Practice acknowledges the right of the patient to refuse consent, delay consent, seek further information, limit the scope of consent, or ask for a chaperone.
- The patient or parent / guardian has the right to withdraw consent at any time.
- A Withdrawal of Patient Consent Form will be required to be completed and documented on the patient’s medical record
- Questions posed by the patient will be answered honestly, and information necessary for them to make an informed decision will not be withheld unless there is a specific reason to withhold it. In all cases where information is withheld, the reasons for this will be recorded in the patient’s clinical record.
- The person who would have been carrying out the procedure will make sure that all issues around the withdrawal of consent have been fully explained to the patient or parent / guardian to enable them to fully understand what may happen if the treatment / operation is not carried out. (The person discussing this must be fully qualified and knowledgeable about the procedure itself and the associated risks).
- The scope of the authority provided by the patient will not be exceeded unless in a medical emergency.
- No alterations will be made to the withdrawal of Consent Form once it has been signed by a patient.
- If a patient is mentally competent to withdraw consent but is physically unable to sign the form, the clinician should complete the form as usual, and ask an independent witness to confirm that the patient has confirmed they wish to withdraw their consent orally or non-verbally.

Dunelm Medical Practice
Patient's Consent to Observer Policy

Introduction

Dunelm Medical Practice is a surgery where students come to learn how to be doctors.

As a teaching Practice, Dunelm Medical Practice provides medical students with a place where they can take the opportunity to talk to patients about their state of health and any illnesses that are affecting them. This helps students to understand how illnesses affect people and how they learn to cope with them day-to-day.

Reception Staff

Upon arrival at the Practice for the consultation, or during the booking of the appointment, the receptionist will explain to you that the doctor / nurse that will be seeing you will also have a medical student or observer sitting in with them and would like your help in providing this service.

The receptionist will also explain that if you are prepared to see or have a medical student or other observer sitting in on your consultation that the practice will need to obtain your consent.

An information leaflet will be provided for your reference and should answer any questions you may have. If this leaflet does not answer all of your concerns, please do not hesitate to raise these with the receptionist who will be only too happy to answer them.

The practice is grateful for your help in enabling us to provide this teaching service, however this is entirely voluntary.

No one will mind if you would rather not see a student or if you change your mind or want the student to leave at any time.

You can also refuse to see particular students, such as those of a different sex or those you have met outside the surgery.

Of course, the care provided to you by the Practice will not be affected in any way.

Please read the following note:

This consent form will be placed in your medical records and a record of this consent will be recorded in your records to state that you have given consent to having observers / medical students in during your consultations.

If at any time you want to withdraw this consent you have this right. If this is the case please put in writing your request to have this withdrawn and this will be removed from your records.

Please remember even if you are happy to have observers / medical students present at your consultation, you do have the right at any time during your consultation to ask for this person to leave the room whilst you are seeing the clinician.

When might I see medical students?

- Students may be sitting with doctors or nurses at the practice. The receptionist should warn you about this and will tell the doctor if you would rather not see a student. Saying 'No' will not have any effect on the care you receive.
- You may be asked if the student can do the consultation while your doctor or nurse watches. The student may be asked questions. If something is said that you do not understand, please ask for clarification.
- You may be asked to see a student before your appointment, or to attend a student surgery. If you are asked to attend a student surgery a doctor will always be in charge and will see you to make sure your problems are dealt with appropriately.
- You may be asked to come in to the surgery specially to talk to students about a problem which has been dealt with by the practice on an earlier occasion. You may also be asked to see students about a longer standing problem to help them understand its effects on your life.
- You may be asked for consent for a medical student to video record your consultation. This recording will be viewed by the doctor and student. With your specific permission, it may also be taken to a teaching session at another practice where a group of four to eight students and a GP tutor will view the recording and give feedback to the student. This is a valuable learning tool for both medical students and experienced doctors.
- You may be asked if students can visit you at home.

- You may say no at any time before or during the consultation. You can also tell us to erase the recording at any time either immediately after the consultation or weeks later.
Such a request will not affect the care you receive from the practice.

How will I be sure they are medical students?

They will always carry photographic identification: usually a University Identity card.

Please ask to see the identification if the students visit you at home.

What do I tell students?

If you are coming to see a doctor or nurse about an illness or problem, then tell the students about it, how it affects your daily life, what worries you have and what you hope to gain from the consultation.

It is important that students learn about illness from the perspective of the patient.

If you are seeing students by special arrangement, then they will want to know how your illness was discovered, how it has developed and how it affects you, your family or friends now.

They will also be interested in the investigations you had, what they were like, your treatment and any side-effects you have had.

It is important for them to hear things in your own words.

If you know what is wrong with you then it is all right to share that with the students, unless the tutor has asked you not to.

Will they want to examine me?

Medical students need to learn how to examine patients sensitively. Your doctor or nurse may ask if a student can examine you during a consultation. If it is too painful or embarrassing you can say 'No'. This will not affect the care you receive.

If a student sees you before a doctor, they may ask to examine you. We hope you would be happy for them to look at your throat or ears, hands or feet.

You may be asked to undress so that a student can examine your trunk or limbs: this is up to you. No one will mind if you refuse or want to wait for the doctor to join the consultation.

Students should not ask to do a sensitive or embarrassing examination unless a doctor or nurse is present.

Can students do tests or treat me?

Medical students are not fully qualified doctors and cannot treat patients or carry out procedures unsupervised. They may however carry out a simple urine test as part of an examination.

A doctor will always check on the need for, and sign, any prescriptions or requests for investigations suggested by a student after discussion with you and the student.

Students have been or are being trained to do simple procedures like taking blood. If the doctor has checked a student's ability, then if you agree, s/he may be allowed to carry out a procedure under supervision.

Remember, if you have any questions or concerns do ask. You can always say 'No' if you are worried!

Can I ask students to explain things to me?

Students often have more time available to them and may be able to explain things in simple language. However, they are still learning so may not have answers to all your questions. What they can do is listen to your questions and ask a doctor or nurse to give you fuller answers.

Do students have access to my records?

It helps students if they can read the history of your problem and see what doctors have found and we assume that agreement to see a student implies permission to look at your records.

Students are, of course, bound by the same rules of confidentiality as any doctor or nurse.

If you don't want students to look at your records please let us know.

Students may see the records of any patient when working with a doctor or nurse; this may include looking at results, dealing with hospital letters or reviewing notes as part of an audit. Students will not be given unsupervised access to your notes without your explicit permission.

Are my views about student behaviour useful?

Yes, indeed! It is always helpful to have feedback both positive and negative about students.

We like to know when they have been warm and helpful or if they have seemed cold or muddled. Please tell the doctor or receptionist whenever you feel it appropriate, or write a note if you prefer.

What happens if a student upsets me?

That should be a very rare event.

If it does happen please let the doctor or someone in the surgery know at once.

Be assured your concerns will be investigated and appropriate action taken.

Finally!

Students learn an enormous amount from the patients they meet.

Thank you for your help.

It could be very important in making sure we have excellent doctors in the future who are both knowledgeable & caring.
